Foreskin Restoration - Why?

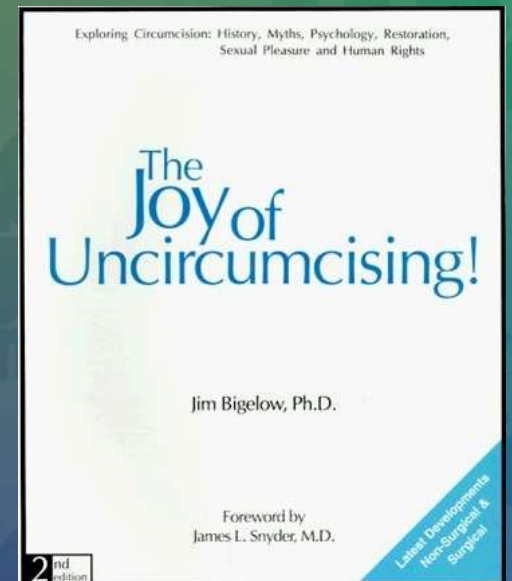

- Because foreskin is gone
- Protect glans from drying and abrasion
- Sensitivity has diminished with time
- Hide status from the Greeks (I Macc. 1:15)
- Take back control of ones own fate
- Provide plush lubricated comfort
- To look normal
- To look like son

Foreskin feels good!

With this simple device, the gains in sensitivity come right away. The cone allows you to pull your own skin forward over your glans and keep it there. Nothing allows your glans and "inner" skin (above the circ scar) to regain health better than a protective sheath of your own skin. It must look puzzling, how it could stay in place without any form of adhesive, but it does. The "obversion" tendency of your skin to roll back out keeps it in place.

If you can roll enough skin forward when flaccid to temporarily "hide" your glans, then this cone will work for you. If you can't, contact me for advice.

Wear this comfortably under your briefs, and while you sleep (you may have to slip it back on occasionally; I get through most nights - including nocturnal erections - without it coming off). Your results depend on how diligently you use the device, and also on how you were cut. Keep your glans covered for a few months and I think you'll be preaching about restoration as loudly as I do. Even if you eventually wish to invest in - or make - a tugging unit to re-grow slack skin, your cone will always be a useful part of your regimen, protecting your sensitivity. (This cone also serves as the retaining shell for the TLC Tugger, available separately).
